People Living With HIV and AIDS on the Brink: Stigma—A Complex Sociocultural Impediment in the Fight Against HIV and AIDS in Botswana

KEITSEOPE NTHOMANG and NTHABISENG PHALADZE

Department of Nursing Education, University of Botswana, Gaborone, Botswana

NOMA OAGILE and BARBARA NGWENYA

Harry Oppenheimer Okavango Research Centre, University of Botswana, Maun, Botswana

NAOMI SEBONI

Department of Nursing Science, University of Botswana, Gaborone, Botswana

KESITEGILE GOBOTSWANG

National Institute of Development Research and Documentation, University of Botswana, Gaborone, Botswana

REBECCA KUBANJI

Department of Nursing Science, University of Botswana, Gaborone, Botswana

HIV-related stigma is a life-altering phenomenon. The consequence of the stigmatization process sets apart stigmatized person(s) as a distinct category, leading to various forms of disapproval, rejection, exclusion, labeling, stereotyping, and discrimination. Stigma of HIV-positive people in Botswana is a complex social phenomenon associated with the disease itself and the behaviors that lead to infection. This is a synthesis paper based on the literature review on HIV- and AIDS-related stigmatization of HIV-positive people in Botswana and in-depth interviews with people living with HIV and AIDS (PLWHAs). I examine the literature on HIV- and AIDS-related stigmatization and subsequent discrimination and the implications for intervention programs for people living with HIV and AIDS. The findings from the literature and in-depth interviews show that

Address correspondence to Nthabiseng Phaladze, PhD, RN, Department of Nursing Education, University of Botswana, Private Bag 0022, Gaborone, Botswana. E-mail: phaladze@mosipi.ub.bw
HIV–AIDS-related stigma is deeply embedded in societal structures and culture which promote nonacceptance of those branded HIV positive. This often is reinforced at a practical level by pervasive negative attitudes toward PLWHAs. Recommendations argue for the adoption of Healthy Relationship. This intervention seeks to promote and strengthen decision-making skills among PLWHAs and programs that promote destigmatization of, and tolerant attitudes toward, PLWHAs.